Mums-to-be hit as classes axed

Anger over antenatal sessions

TWO sisters expecting their first babies just two days apart were upset to discover the antenatal classes they had been expecting to attend together have been cancelled.

Claire Grant, 31, and sister Catherine Kimber, 28, are both due at the end of April.

When they went along for their 25-week check-up at Haverhill Health Centre hoping to get more details about the antenatal classes provided by West Suffolk NHS, they were told that the sessions currently under way will be the last to be held in the town.

Claire, of Ruffles Road, Haverhill, said they had been disappointed to learn that the weekly classes would not take place, with just a single two-hour session in Bury St Edmunds offered instead.

She said: "There has been no consultation or anything, it has just stopped. I am having my baby at the Rosie and there is nothing for Haverhill mothers there. I have been told that I could end up having my baby at West Suffolk, because the Rosie is always closing because it is full."

"Even if it was just closed for second babies it would not be as bad, because at least you have a bit of an idea what to expect. I think they should provide it for your first baby. I was gutted. I am 31 and I have worked all my life and paid money into the system, but when it is your turn to have something back, it is not there for you. It is really frustrating."

Catherine, 28, of Osprey Road, Haverhill, who plans to have her baby at West Suffolk, said they had looked into attending National Childbirth Trust classes, but would have to travel to Newmarket or Halstead to attend at a cost of more than £200.

She said: "We were told a lot of the young mothers miss appointments at the hospital because they cannot afford to get to Bury, so they are not going to be able to get there for this. It is not just about the birth and looking after the baby, it is also the support from other mothers we will miss out on."

Patricia Davis, head of midwifery and general manager at West Suffolk Hospital, said: "We introduced a new 'active birth'

Mums-to-be dismayed as local antenatal classes scrapped in 'short-sighted' move class for women using our midwifery-led birthing unit in 2010. The sessions give them information about a normal birth and what to expect during labour, as well as tools to help them relax so that they can have the best possible experience during the birth of their baby.

"The new sessions will provide women and their partners with a more modern alternative to traditional antenatal classes. Feedback from those who have already taken part has been very positive, and we are confident that those attending in the future will also find the session useful."

Suffolk county and borough Cllr Anne Gower has already contacted MP Matthew Hancock about the change. She said: "This is all very short-sighted in the extreme.

"We already have a situation with NEETS (not in education, employment or training), single teenage mums and other vulnerable families, who need more support not less.

"This will have an impact on those children which will then impact on the education and health systems for years in the future."

Out-of-hours cuts are another blow to town

CUTS to the out-of-hours doctor service have provoked more protests – coming after the announcement of plans to close a walk-in clinic.

Residents and councillors in Haverhill have already slammed plans to close the popular Crown Health Centre, which has attracted more than 22,000 visits since it opened two years ago and won a national patient satisfaction poll.

Recently Harmoni, the company which runs the out-of-hours service across Suffolk, announced that it would be closing three of its bases – including Newmarket – and although Haverhill will retain a base, it will no longer be manned by a doctor full-time, leaving it unmanned if a doctor is out on call.

Cllr Anne Gower, who is registered as a patient at the Crown Health Centre, was so concerned about depleted health provision in Haverhill that she wrote again to MP Matthew Hancock.

Cllr Gower, pictured, wrote: "The recent news about out-of-hours provision (or lack of it), if I am reading it right, should be a cause for grave concern in this town.

"I have already been contacted by a resident who tells a horrendous story about trying to get someone in the out-of-hours service to see him over Christmas when he couldn't get his own doctor to give him an appointment or to get into the Crown clinic.

"If registered patients can't get an appointment now in a decent timescale, what about the 1,000 patients who are going to descend on the GPs from the Crown Health Centre?"

"I am severely concerned at the potential reduction in health service provision in this town and I would like to support your intention to ensure that this town gets the service levels it needs and deserves before we have a tragedy on our hands.

"Health affects every aspect of our community and impacts heavily on community, education, work and relationships."

Dr David Lee, Regional Medical Director for Harmoni, said: "Under the new structure, the Haverhill base will be retained and an appointment will be able to be made with a GP at the base when required out-of-hours, a situation which remains unchanged from the existing arrangement."

"Since taking over the GP out-of-hours contract in Suffolk in April 2010, we have been analysing and reviewing the number of patients who contact the service, where they live and what happened to them once they contacted the service.

"We believe making changes to the service allows us to use our clinical staff more effectively to meet the needs of the population of Suffolk. This will enable Harmoni to deliver a consistent level of service to patients across the county, and solve the problem of occasionally having to 'close' a base due to lack of available clinician."

Man accused of holding knife to throat of girl, 13

A MAN accused of grabbing a 13-year-old schoolgirl and holding a knife to her throat has appeared in court.

Derek Bowering, 42, appeared at Bury St Edmunds Magistrates' Court yesterday facing one charge of false imprisonment and two of possessing a knife in a public place on Tuesday, January 31.

Bowering, of Abbots Road, Haverhill, had his application for bail refused and was remanded in custody when his case was sent to Ipswich Crown Court for a preliminary hearing on February 9. He gave no indication of his plea.

In opposing bail, Sarah-Jane Atkins, prosecuting, said the charges arose from an incident in Clare where Bowering is alleged to have produced a kitchen knife at the home of a 19-year-old girl and another in Haverhill an hour later.

Armed police responded to calls that a man was armed and dangerous. They were present when Bowering was alleged to have grabbed the girl, who he did not know, as she walked home from school.

Remanded over breach

A MAN accused of stalking a 13-year-old schoolgirl has been remanded in custody by magistrates after breaching his bail conditions.

Nigel Proctor, 43, appeared at Bury St Edmunds Magistrates' Court yesterday when he admitted breaking a bail condition that he should not go to Duddery Hill, Haverhill. Magistrates refused his application for bail and adjourned the case against him for a week.

Proctor, of Landseer Court, Haverhill, appeared in court on January 23 accused of harassing the girl, who the court ordered should not be identified.

The case was adjourned for a trial to take place in May and Proctor was released on bail with conditions that he did not go to Duddery Hill, Haverhill, or any road adjoining it, and did not contact any witnesses.

Sarah Jane Atkins, prosecuting, said the brother of the girl making the complaint against him had seen Proctor coming out of the BP garage in Duddery Hill, Haverhill, on January 27.

Man accused of supplying drugs to Highpoint prison

A MAN accused of being part of a gang involved in the supply of drugs at a Suffolk prison has appeared in court.

Adam Bloy, 25, of Woodward Avenue, King's Lynn, was arrested by police investigating claims that illegal drugs were being supplied at the prison at Stradishall last year. Bloy, who is being held at HMP Swaleside in Kent, is charged with two offences of conspiracy to supply heroin and cannabis on May 27. He appeared at Ipswich Crown Court for a preliminary hearing but has indicated no plea to the charges at this stage.

Judge John Holt told Bloy that he would next appear in court on March 23 for a plea and case management hearing and he will continue to be held in custody until then. Two other people arrested at the same time are due to appear on the same date to also enter pleas. They are Alex Sheppard, 21, of John Davis Way, Watlington, near Kings Lynn, who worked at HMP Highpoint and Fiona Wraight, a 21-year-old financial advisor of Rockingham Road, Bury St Edmunds. Both are charged with conspiracy to supply heroin, a class A drug. Sheppard and Wraight are both on bail.

Electrical gear stolen

A LAPTOP, sat-nav and computer games were stolen from a house.

A home on Quakers Lane in Haverhill was broken into between 11.30am and 4.35pm on Wednesday, January 25. An Advent laptop was stolen along with a sat-nav, iPod, a Nintendo Wii and games and a Playstation 3 console, games and accessories.

Pupils are a cut above

CHILDREN got some help from a professional hairdresser in transforming part of their school into a salon.

Head teacher Rosie Campbell was even brave enough to allow the children to style her hair during the event at Westfield primary School in Haverhill.

Year 1 pupils at the school finished off their topic work on Rapunzel by transforming their role play area into a hairdressing salon as part of a fairytale day. The children were delighted when professional hairdresser Cheryl Collins, of Salon 56 in Kedington, visited to curl, plait and gel the hair. They were also able to partake in activities including a dance workshop provided by Ronnie Walford of Lane Dance Centres, drama, baking gingerbread and art and crafts.

Teachers Clare Bowyer and Michelle Hopkins led the event. Clare said: "This very successful topic has given Year 1 many opportunities to develop writing and number through play, including making appointments, price lists and till receipts."

Taxi: Kevin Forrester.

Burglar ordered a getaway taxi – in his own name

TWO bungling burglars piled stolen electrical equipment worth thousands into the back of a taxi which one had ordered in his own name, a court has heard.

Kevin Forrester, 33, and Robert Scullion, 28, admitted stealing electrical equipment worth about £7,500 from a log cabin in the garden of a house in Haverhill when they appeared at Bury St Edmunds Magistrates' Court.

Lesla Small, prosecuting, told the court that Kevin Baker of Lordscroft Lane, Haverhill, kept a large amount of electronic and recording equipment in the shed-type building in his garden. He reported to police that this equipment had been stolen between 8am and 10am on January 11.

After making enquiries, officers went to Scullion's home in Montford Court, Haverhill, where they found him and Forrester, as well as Mr Baker's electrical goods.

It emerged that a taxi had been called to transport the items, ordered by Forrester, who was a regular customer with the company.

The two men had the items in a shopping trolley from the nearby Tesco store and loaded them into the taxi, which took them about 10 minutes. The taxi took them to Montford Court, where the items were unloaded.

Damage to the lock and door frame at the log cabin, as well as repairs to a CCTV system there, were estimated at £1,100.

Lyndon Davies, for Forrester, said his client had broken into the building intending to use it as somewhere to sleep, but once he saw the electrical items, he acted impulsively and contacted his co-defendant to help him steal them.

He said: "It was done in a very unsophisticated way, piling the items into a shopping trolley. Very unsurprisingly, given Mr Forrester's actions by giving his own name, the police are contacted and the items are recovered pretty much straight away."

Forrester, who was given a 12-month community order by magistrates last April, has previous convictions for offences including burglary. Mr Davies said there were issues regarding his accommodation and he was also on anti-psychotic medication.

Mark Plummer, for Scullion, said Forrester had been the prime mover and his client was not involved in the break-in, only taking the items away.

Magistrates adjourned the case until February 2 for pre-sentence reports to be prepared, with all options open.

Police delighted with help to solve 'world's stupidest crime'

A POLICE inspector believes 'the world's stupidest crime' may have been committed on his patch – but praised the public for helping his officers to catch the culprits within a few hours.

Insp Peter Ferrie said police received a call from a taxi driver on the morning of January 11, concerned that two men had loaded thousands of pounds worth of electrical equipment into the back of his vehicle.

The driver recognised the voice of the man who called the taxi as a regular customer. The second man got into the taxi with the stolen goods and was taken to his own home address. Amazingly, the pair had appeared surprised when the police appeared at their door. They were arrested and charged with the offences by 4pm that same day.

Inspector Ferrie, who has recently reported a 'crime spike' of increased house and shed burglaries in Haverhill, said although it had not taken a great deal of detective work to track down the culprits, it was vital information from members of the public which had allowed them to be caught so quickly. He also felt the incident would be a strong contender in his monthly award for the best piece of police work.

Insp Ferrie said: "Although it probably was the world's stupidest crime, we would not have known about it without the information from the taxi driver and other members of the public. We had a number of calls from people who had seen them loading up the taxi and thought it looked suspicious, as well as people in Montford Court who saw the items being unloaded."

"It was almost like an episode of The Bill, but it really happened like that. It is a perfect example of how reports and information from the public are crucial in solving this type of crime."

Sex offender back in court

A CONVICTED sex offender registered with a GP under a false name, a court heard.

Michael Duffield, 49, of Lark Close, Haverhill, was banned from using anything other than his real name following his release from prison.

Ipswich Crown Court was told last Thursday that Duffield had been subject for an indefinite period to the requirements of the Sexual Offences Register.

He was released from prison in October 2010, part-way through an eight-year sentence. He had been jailed after being convicted of 15 separate offences including rape, said prosecutor Robert Sadd.

It was a condition of his registration as a sex offender that Duffield had to give the police seven days' notice if he changed his name. When Duffield registered with a local GP he used a name other than his own.

Defending, Richard Kelly said that Duffield had admitted failing to notify a change of name. Duffield, who appeared in court in a wheelchair and who may require spinal surgery later this year, was motivated to comply with any orders imposed upon him, said Mr Kelly.

Judge John Holt ordered Duffield to participate in the Thames Valley Sex Offenders programme for the next three years.

New charity goal for brave student Liam

STUDENT Liam Plumridge will be running, cycling and swimming next week to raise cash for a charity which has helped him since he was in his teens.

Liam, 21, also hopes to raise the profile of the Dyspraxia Foundation by taking on a personal challenge in Eastbourne on Monday, to complete a 2.1k run, a 2.1k cycle and a 2.1k swim.

Liam, who was born in Cambridge and has spent all his life in Haverhill, is currently a student at Brighton University in Eastbourne.

He suffers from dyspraxia, a 'hidden' condition which affects co-ordination, balance, fine motor skills, language, thought and perception. He was diagnosed when he was seven years old.

A major milestone in Liam's life in 2007 was when he was seen on BBC 2's Across the Andes - Beyond Boundaries programme with nine other disabled people, completing an expedition in Ecuador from the Amazon rainforest across the Andes and ending at the Pacific Coast.

Since the programme, Liam has set up his own voluntary public speaking service, won awards and met politicians.

Liam has been a Young Ambassador for the Dyspraxia Foundation and is now a trustee for the charity, believed to be one of the youngest in the country

Tracy Livermore, Development Officer South for the Dyspraxia Foundation, said: "In line with many other charities in the current climate, the Dyspraxia Foundation has had to drastically reduce services due to a severe drop in income and, sadly, to temporarily suspend the telephone helpline – the first port of call and contact for concerned parents, adults and professionals.

"By donating any money to this challenge, your money will be assisting to support the incredible work of the Dyspraxia Foundation.

"The foundation is in desperate need of financial support and if it does not receive funds soon may be at risk of closure."

Donations can be made at www.justgiving.com/LiamPlumridge.

The Dyspraxia Foundation has a parent/carer support group in Suffolk which meets monthly in Bury St Edmunds.

For more information contact charlotte@cillespie.org or dyspraxia@dyspraxiafoundation.org.uk.

Bid to save our heritage

ACTION is being taken to cut the damage caused to Suffolk's heritage by thieves and vandals.

Crimes committed in Suffolk have included the theft of ancient oak chests from churches and lead from their roofs as well as metal detection in Anglo-Saxon cemeteries.

Suffolk County Council is now to sign up to the memorandum of understanding from the national Alliance to Reduce Crime against Heritage (ARCH).

ARCH brings together local authorities, residents' associations, the police and other local groups in identifying local heritage assets which may be at risk and to encourage parties to let the police know about any suspicious behaviour spotted.

Cllr Guy McGregor, portfolio holder for roads and transport at Suffolk County Council, said: "Heritage crime blights communities and must be stopped, which is why I am delighted to commit Suffolk County Council to this new initiative to work alongside local communities, farmers, landowners, the police and English Heritage to tackle it and protect Suffolk's heritage."

The Suffolk Historic Environment Record, the county council's official database of heritage sites, has more than 27,000 records of archaeological sites and findspots and 13,000 historic buildings.

Stick at it: Staff at Haverhill Leisure Centre get ready for the new fitness craze, rush hockey.

CP

In a rush to try new hockey craze?

A FAST and furious new sport based on the traditional game of hockey will be launched at Haverhill Leisure Centre next week.

Rush hockey is a fun game based on much simpler rules than those of traditional hockey. It can be played indoors or outdoors on smaller pitches. It can be played five-a-side or four-a-side and is designed to fit around the busy lifestyles of today's sports players.

Haverhill Leisure Centre will be offering a free month-long trial on Mondays from 7pm-8pm, starting outside on the astroturf from Monday.

Participants can turn up in their sportswear and all equipment and a coach will be provided. If the trial is successful then the centre will offering the session every week for a small charge.

Laura Flowers, assistant manager at Haverhill Leisure Centre, said: "We are always keen to try something different here at the sports centre and rush hockey is fantastic for people with busy lifestyles who do not want to play a full traditional game of hockey or belong to a team.

"It is a great stress-buster, physical and a great all-round workout.

"It has been heralded as a new era for hockey and we hope to attract more people to the game. Plus it is free to try for a month."

Boys' abuser gets 13 years

A MAN convicted of sex offences against young boys has been jailed for 13 years.

Benjamin Waldron, 37, of Strawberry Fields, Haverhill, was earlier this month found guilty by a jury at Ipswich Crown Court of nine separate offences.

He was found not guilty of three others. Judge John Holt sentenced Waldron to 13 years' imprisonment, telling him: "These offences were extremely serious."

Despite having pleaded not guilty, Waldron, right, had admitted his offending when interviewed by a probation officer after the jury returned their verdicts, the court heard.

Michael Proctor, for Waldron, said his client had himself been the victim of abuse when a child. None of the offences he committed against the two boys had involved any intimidation or pre-planning and had been opportunistic.

At his sentencing, Michael Proctor, defending, said that Waldron had been frank with the probation officer about the extent of his offending.

He said: "The fact that Mr Waldron has in that report made admissions is something that shows a level of responsibility, a level of remorse."

Waldron was convicted of five offences of sexual assault on a male child, one of causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity, one of indecent assault and two of rape of a male child aged under 13.

All the offences involved the same boy with the exception of one of the offences of rape. Waldron was found not guilty of two further allegations of indecent assault and one of rape.

During Waldron's trial the jury heard allegations that the offending had spanned a five-year period starting in 2003.

What had begun as touching a boy's legs over his clothing had progressed on two occasions to rape on a settee at a house in Haverhill, said prosecutor Charles Myatt.

The allegations had emerged in December 2010 after one of the boys confided in his mother. Giving evidence via a TV link into the courtroom, one of the victims said he had found the only way he could halt the attacks was by crying.

Judge Holt said it appeared that Waldron's offending had ceased some time before the boys disclosed what had happened to them and the disclosures made to the probation officer showed that he was starting to accept what he had done. In addition to being jailed, Waldron was made the subject of an indefinite Sexual Offences Prevention Order.

I wish all dogs were on leads

Sir, while I welcome the decision to make (by law) dog owners keep their dogs on leads on the Recreation Ground, I only wish it was the same in the rest of the town's parks.

Then I could walk my dog without fear of having dogs approach us and possible problems ie: dog fights or worse.

I no longer walk in East Town Park because of the dogs allowed to run there free and off-lead.

This follows a very nasty incident I had with a dog owner in that park. We are lucky to have lots of fields (not the sports fields) around the town criss-crossed with footpaths – let the dog owners who like their dogs to run off-lead go to these places, leaving our parks safe for children, older people and responsible dog owners – who keep their dogs on leads.

I'd like to know how the owner of a dog running off-lead knows when the dog has left a mess so that he can then clear it up.

Do you recognise anyone in the picture or know who the team were? Do you know where and when it was taken?

Send your answers to: Memories, Haverhill Weekly News, 4 Queen Street, Haverhill, CB9 9EF by Tuesday morning, or email editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

Picture: 243933.

Last week's Memories photograph, from our archives, was taken at the opening of an Oxfam shop in Haverhill in October 1974.

Picture: 314778.

When are you happiest? Being with my family and friends, helping Slimming World members become who they want to be.

How do you relax? Listening to music, cooking and eating in a Slimming World-friendly way.

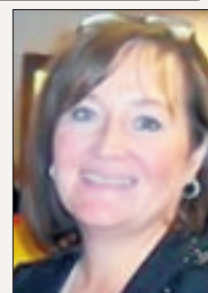

Pet hates? Impatient and rude people, smoking and swearing in public places.

Guilty pleasure? Everything in moderation then there is nothing to feel guilty about. Favourite book/movie: To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee and Birdsong by Sebastian Faulks; Moulin Rouge.

Favourite holiday destination: Wherever I go to next and Southwold.

Your hero: My children for reasons that they know.

Four people you'd invite to dinner: Margret Miles Bramwell, the founder of Slimming World; Nina Barough, the founder of Walk the Walk – both these organisations have turned my life around in the last two years – George Clooney as he is easy on the eye, and my husband Gary as I would need someone to keep me grounded! What would your super-power be? To wave a magic wand and let everyone who joins a Slimming World group reach their target weight quickly; I wouldn't do it for them as it's about making changes for life. Also, having spent a lot of time on paediatric wards over the years, never having to see another baby/child or parent go on that rollercoaster ride.

Tania, from Kedington, is a Slimming World consultant in Haverhill. She lost four stones with the organisation during the course of 2010.

What three possessions would you take with you to a desert island? My iPad as it has my music, books and photos on, Arfur my dog as he always seems interested in what I have to say, and someone with survival and boat building skills – maybe Indiana Jones!

If you ruled the country for a day what would you do? I am not sure that a day would be enough. There are lots of things that I would like to see change, but I would start with obesity in young people. I am always surprised at lack of food knowledge and basic cooking skills – maybe this is something that could be tackled in education changing back to home economics instead of food technology for instance. What do you love most about living in Kedington/Haverhill? Community, countryside, feeling safe. Until I started training for my first marathon I had not appreciated what a beautiful part of the country we live in. I love the way Haverhill is still evolving and changing and although a lot of people are quick to knock the town, part of my job is now visiting other local towns and I know Haverhill has a lot to offer. We as a community need to support it and help make the changes.

Fun as little dragons roar at nursery

YOUNGSTERS from Burton End Nursery in Haverhill, celebrated the Year of the Dragon by creating dragon masks, painting pictures of pandas and learning facts about China.

Children from both the morning and afternoon sessions put on a Chinese celebration performance, which included a dragon dance to music and a celebration song, and invited families to share the experience.

The children finished the week-long festivities with a Chinese feast, where they enjoyed trying to eat noodles with chopsticks.

MP welcomes Fred verdict

HAVERHILL'S MP has welcomed the decision to strip the former Royal Bank of Scotland boss of his knighthood.

Matthew Hancock, Conservative MP for West Suffolk, had previously laid a motion in the House of Commons calling for Fred Goodwin's title to be removed.

He said the announcement this week meant the principle of just rewards had been upheld.

He said: "Of course stripping Fred Goodwin of his title doesn't solve the problems he caused while chief executive of RBS, but it does mean an important principle has been upheld and one which matters deeply to the British people: the principle of just rewards."

"The honours system should

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

recognise those who make great contributions to our society, not those who take from it and walk away."

Mr Goodwin, pictured, served as chief executive of the bank between 2001 and 2008 and was granted the honour in 2004 for services to banking.

He was widely criticised after retiring early with an annual pension of about £700,000 shortly before the RBS announced massive losses and was bailed out by the taxpayer.

The forfeiture committee recommended Mr Goodwin's honour should be removed to the Queen, who has the authority to rescind the title.

Mr Hancock said: "I believe the forfeiture committee have made the right decision. Fred Goodwin broke one of the biggest banks in the world, took early retirement and left the British taxpayer to pick up the bill.

"His decision to pursue an exceptionally complex banking takeover just after the onset of the credit crunch and without proper due diligence was a reckless gamble that brought down a 300-year-old business and cost the country £45bn.

"Even as Alex Salmond and Gordon Brown cheered him on, it is now clear that Goodwin's breakneck expansion of RBS in the years before the crash was unsustainable and contributed directly to the bank's collapse. A knighthood granted by Labour for 'services to banking' was clearly indefensible and it should have been returned long ago."

Tots take a gander at goose

PRE-SCHOOL youngsters enjoyed a treat when they were taken along to see the pantomime Mother Goose at their local arts centre.

A group of 69 under-fives from the Stepping Stones group in Haverhill attended the show at town's arts centre last Saturday. The trip was subsidized by the Friends @ Stepping Stones (Fundraising Committee).

The children all had juice and popcorn at the interval and four of them were asked to go up on stage. George Plumb, a former pupil of Stepping Stones, celebrated his sixth birthday on Saturday and was given a special mention with all the audience singing Happy Birthday to him.

The group would like to thank the Friends, staff and parents who went along, Jean Ager for arranging the tickets and Mary Argent, for having all the popcorn and juice ready and clearing up the room.

Anyone wanting to join a waiting list for places at the group in September can call (01440) 763833.

Hundreds speak out on bid to shut clinic

MORE than 200 people have already spoken out on plans to close a walk-in clinic.

Councillors and others have already protested at plans to close the Crown Health Centre in Haverhill, even though it has treated more than 22,000 people.

NHS Suffolk said the centre had failed in its aim of reducing admissions to local accident and emergency departments and was too expensive, with annual running costs of more than £1.2m. Also, no cost-effective permanent base could be found in the town for it to be moved to.

So far, 231 people have filled in a questionnaire as part of an engagement exercise.

Martin Royal, NHS Suffolk's director of corporate services said: "It is important that local people give their views. The attendance by many local people at the recent

BY JO DEEKS

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

Haverhill Town Council meeting was a valuable opportunity to discuss the plans.

"It is encouraging that more than 200 people have taken the time to fill in a questionnaire, with views that both oppose and support the plan."

People can give their views by completing an online survey form by February 17. Go to www.suffolk.nhs.uk/haverhill or request a hard copy questionnaire by calling NHS Suffolk on (01473) 770014.

A summary of the responses and the outcome of the consultation will be published on www.suffolk.nhs.uk and will also be available at surgeries.

Escaped prisoner appears in court

Highpoint convict is arrested in Scotland after manhunt

A PRISONER who went on the run after being sprung from the clutches of Highpoint prison officers as they escorted him to hospital has appeared in court after being arrested in Scotland.

As reported in last week's Weekly News, Andrew Farndon, 26, left, was at the centre of a nationwide manhunt after an armed accomplice helped him escape custody outside West Suffolk Hospital in Bury St Edmunds last Wednesday evening.

Suffolk Police confirmed the prisoner, who is serving an indeterminate sentence for public protection, was arrested in New Cumnock, Ayrshire, south-west Scotland, following a joint investigation with Strathclyde Police.

Farndon, who is originally from Coventry, appeared before Ayr Sheriff Court on Monday charged with was charged with contravening the firearms act, the road traffic act and criminal law in Scotland.

A further four people, three men aged 16, 33 and 43, and a woman aged 44, were charged with offences connected to the escape.

Farndon's arrest came as his mother made a public appeal urging him to contact police. Asking her son to hand himself in on Sky News, Kate Farndon said: "I would like to know that you're OK, I would like to know how your wound is, if it's serious, if you need medical attention, but most of all sweetheart, I would like you to hand yourself in."

It is understood Farndon suffered a knife wound at Highpoint prison in Stradishall before being taken to the West Suffolk Hospital's accident & emergency department in a taxi accompanied by two guards at 6.50pm last Wednesday.

On arrival, a waiting gunman confronted the male and female prison officials and threatened them with his weapon, before fleeing with Farndon across the car park.

His escape was the second in just a week, after an "extremely dangerous" category A prisoner, murder suspect John Anslow, was sprung from a prison van after it left Hewell Prison in Worcestershire. He remains at large.

Farndon previously escaped by leaping from the dock at Coventry Crown Court in 2007, but was sentenced in his absence to an indeterminate sentence for public protection (IPP) and told he must serve at least two years before being considered for parole.

He was found guilty of grievous bodily harm after a hammer attack left his victim with a fractured skull, but officials classed him as a category C prisoner - meaning he was unlikely to make a determined escape bid.

Your House & Home

Your imagination creates style

Fusion: Contrasting black/white, east/west is a very effective option.

WE can all suffer "room envy" at the sight of those glamorous settings in magazines or on television, but emulating their style in our homes seems ever more impossible in these cash-strapped times.

"We've all become so much more style aware these days. There's just so much inspiration all around us, from gorgeous film and TV locations through to those boutique hotels," says Isobel McKenzie-Price, editorial director of Ideal Home magazine.

"But just because money's a little tighter than before, it doesn't mean we're prepared to compromise when it comes to decorating our own homes."

McKenzie-Price has interpreted the signature styles of interior designers Kelly Hoppen, Tricia Guild and Nicky Haslam in February's issue using affordable high-street homeware and furnishings.

So take lessons from the designers and transform your home.

ADVERTISEMENT FEATURE

FOR HOPPEN'S CHIC LOOK...

Kelly Hoppen's style is a fusion of east and west, combining simplicity with sumptuous textures and luxe finishes, and a colour palette of taupes, beiges and creams with black as a grounding, defining colour.

Creating symmetry is key to her streamlined, structured style and it helps create a calm, ordered interior for a living space.

She advises positioning furniture to line up neatly around an existing fireplace or window.

"Sofas should face one another and armchairs should be at a 45-degree angle to sofas," she says.

When adding shelves, pictures and smaller pieces of furniture, position them in exact symmetry with the larger pieces of furniture, Hoppen adds.

FOR HASLAM'S OPULENT GLAMOUR...

Nicky Haslam's trademark style is all about charm and wit, combining classic elements with no-holds-barred modern glamour.

"Think theatre," says Haslam. "Go for all-out opulence, glitz and glamour. Ornate fireplaces and delicate panelling will add to the whimsical feel. This style should really get people talking."

For a dining room, use a classic combination of crisp white cotton for a tablecloth and linen upholstery, and then an injection of shimmer using silver-effect candelabra, crystal glassware and decanters.

Add sensual luxury with soft silks for curtains and cushions, and the finishing touch – an over-the-top floral centrepiece.

FOR GUILD'S VIBRANT COLOUR...

Tricia Guild, founder of Designers Guild, is known for her skilful colour combinations and innovative interpretations of style.

"No colour is too bold or too zingy," she says. "Rev it up by choosing the brightest shades and then balance them with a high percentage of black and white."

Don't be afraid to mix modern and antique furniture, as well as vintage and new accessories, and create maximum impact by combining patterns of varying sizes rather than playing it safe with co-ordinates.

Think theatre: Being over-the-top always works where it's done in moderation.

John is walking on air

Born with a serious heart condition, John Chamberlain is now the star of his own radio show – aged just 12. Louise Martin reports.

Radio days: John with dad Fonz. Right, John in the studio and below right, John in hospital as a baby.

JOHNN Chamberlain may only be 12 years old, but he knows exactly what he wants to do when he leaves school. When he isn't playing football with his mates, John likes to join his dad Fonz at work at Envision, the local TV and radio station he founded in December 2010.

With his own weekly slot and with two eight-hour radio marathons to his name, John is already following in his dad's footsteps to become a successful presenter. But it's been a tough journey for the father-and-son team.

Fonz was just 19 when he began suffering from depression. At the same time his partner, Roseanna, was pregnant with John, their first child. The couple were looking forward to the happy addition to their family, but at the 12-week scan were dealt the devastating news their son had a serious heart condition.

"It was very scary to be told that," remembers Fonz, 32. "I hit rock bottom; I suppose it was the tipping edge. It was like everything seemed to be going wrong and that was the final thing. I blamed myself for it; I thought it was my fault and I'd brought it upon him."

The couple spent the rest of the pregnancy worried for their son's health and when he was born at the Rosie Maternity Hospital, Cambridge, tiny and blue, he was whisked away for tests before they could meet him.

"We knew nothing about what was going on for the first couple of hours," says Fonz. "It was very confusing and then they came back and said that he had to be taken to Great Ormond Street Hospital to have emergency surgery."

As well as having a hole in his heart, John was diagnosed with tetralogy of fallot. A rare condition (affecting around 1 in 1,000 babies), the heart defect results in low oxygenation of blood flowing around the body.

Just 24 hours after he was born, John was rushed to the children's hospital, with his parents following closely behind. At two days old, John underwent five hours of open-heart surgery. After an agonising wait, he made it through the operation and was transferred to intensive care where he was wired up to life-support.

Despite further medication, John showed no signs of improving. "It was touch and go," remembers Fonz. "They told us it didn't look good because he wasn't responding to anything."

Fonz and Roseanna stayed at the hospital around the clock, waiting for their son to improve.

Two weeks after he was born, on Christmas Eve, his condition hadn't changed and Fonz, desperate to try anything that might help, prayed for his son. "I'd never prayed in my whole life and I prayed that all I wanted for Christmas was for my son to be better."

On Christmas morning, Fonz's prayers were answered. The new parents were called to their son's bedside and, fearing the worst, they rushed to be with him. But John had finally turned the corner and the couple were overwhelmed to hear he had begun responding to treatment.

"It was like a miracle," smiles Fonz. "Overnight he had suddenly started to respond. It was like my wish had come true."

Growing stronger each day, after a month-and-a-half John was transferred to Addenbrooke's, and a few weeks later was finally allowed home.

Bringing their son home was, Fonz admits, a worrying time for the new parents. But as John continued to improve, the couple were dealt another blow when Fonz's feelings of despair deepened and he was later diagnosed with clinical depression.

"I'd lock myself away; I wouldn't go out anywhere," he remembers. "I thought the world was against me and if I interacted with people I'd bring them bad luck."

When John was 2 he required two more operations, and doctors predict he will need further open heart surgery when he turns 13 to replace a valve he has now out-grown from his first operation. The family hope this will be the final operation he has to go through and, with support from his family and friends and Impington Village College, where he is a pupil, John is feeling confident about the future.

The condition can result in a range of symptoms including a slower rate of growth, blindness and shortness of breath, but the football-mad Chelsea supporter doesn't suffer from any of these problems.

"He lives a normal life and he's not on any medication," says Fonz. "The one thing he does suffer from is that he's got a very weak immune system, so it takes him longer to get over a cold, and if there's something going round he'll get it, but he has no other effects."

Describing Roseanna as "strong" throughout his lowest times, she whole-heartedly supported Fonz when he approached the community radio station 209 with an idea for a history-themed show. Called The Cambridge Time Traveller, the team loved it and it became a monthly slot.

"Sadly that radio station has now closed but I've worked for a range of stations since and John used to come with me and sit and watch what I was doing," he says.

"They used to tell him that when he was older they'd give him a show, and he thought that was brilliant."

John now does have his own children's show on his dad's radio station Envision. The internet-based station is designed to give people with little or no radio experience the training and opportunity to broadcast on the airwaves.

Presenting every Sunday from 3pm-4pm, John admits it was a nerve-racking experience the first time he went on air.

"I was nervous but now I've got used to it and it's all right," he says. "My first two shows I did on my own, but now I do it with a friend. We talk about the top new toys, gadgets, sports and tell some jokes. In the future I want to have my own radio station and have open days for kids."

"He gets no input from me," adds Fonz. "He scripts the whole thing himself and puts it altogether."

Fonz still suffers from depression but says he has "learnt to cope with it". The couple went on to have two more children after John - Tom, 10, and Faye, 6 - all have helped to get Fonz through his low times, and he is now free of medication and positive about the future.

"I'm very proud of John. He's been through a lot and he recognises he's been through a lot. He shows concern for other people and wants to help other people," says Fonz. "With his radio show, he saw me do it and then he wanted to do it and now he wants to encourage other people to have a go."

School welcomes Olympic hero

AN Olympic Gold medallist encouraged youngsters to achieve their "dreams" as he officially opened their new school centre.

Dr David Hemery won the 400m hurdles at the Mexico games in 1968 in a then world record time of 48.12 seconds before embarking on a career in teaching.

And it was these two passions in life which he spoke about in Linton Village College as guest of honour at a ceremony to mark the addition of a network of new buildings.

The former BBC Sports Personality of the Year also took time to present medallions to Year 7 students who have been taking part in his 2012 charity, 21st Century Legacy.

He said: "They have embraced my dreams-driven programme that encourages youngsters to be self-aware and self-responsible."

College open evening puts spotlight on apprenticeships

A CHANCE to find out about apprenticeships available through West Suffolk College, Bury St Edmunds, is offered at an open evening.

The event takes place on Wednesday, February 8, from 6.30pm to 8.30pm, during National Apprenticeship Week.

Anyone over 16 can take up an apprenticeship and for those aged 19-24, the training is part subsidised.

Work Based Learning courses start on different dates throughout the year and there are opportunities to combine study with paid work under the apprenticeship scheme. An eight-week Pathway to Apprenticeships course is designed for learners who need to improve their CV writing, interview presentation and other job-related skills to help them apply successfully for an apprenticeship or employment.

The college logs apprenticeship vacancies online and links up to the national vacancies service, where more than 100,000 potential apprentices are registered.

School leavers, parents, mature students and employers will be welcome to drop in to find out what is on offer. People can also contact the college information centre on (01284) 716333 or visit the website www.westsuffolk.ac.uk.

Spot the difference.

An Englishman's gnome

WHAT can you tell us about the themes of Neighbourhood Watch?

I think it's all in the title. It's a cautionary play. It addresses modern hang-ups such as law and order, health and safety. Are we safe in our beds when there are lawless youths roaming the streets while the police seem powerless? It's tapping into that sort of fear.

Is it as dark as it sounds? There is a gnome on the poster after all...

It's in my dark farce mode. I've always been interested in how, out of tiny things, wars are often fought. Whenever history is examined, you always say: is that really what started it? Helen of Troy was responsible for an awful lot! Neighbourhood Watch begins with a genuine misunderstanding where no one is prepared to stand down and the reason becomes all but forgotten, but nonetheless causes a war.

And you're tackling this from the perspective of something as apparently innocuous as a Neighbourhood Watch scheme?

It's about committees which have a way of being taken over by lunatics and extremists. Sane people often haven't the patience or staying power to serve on committees. So the people in charge of them are often those with nothing better to do but manipulate other people's lives.

ALAN AYCKBOURN tells The Guide why his latest creation, Neighbourhood Watch – at the Cambridge Arts Centre this week – is 'more oil than watercolour' and how big battles can be borne out of the most trivial of disagreements

Then there are sub-committees, which are answerable to nobody and do all the work from finance to, in this case, retribution! Very few normal people volunteer for those, as that's another evening out of their lives, so you find people volunteering for sub-committees who shouldn't be in charge of a box of matches let alone the future of an estate. (For more information, please see my earlier play Ten Times Table!).

What quickly emerges from this scheme is a particularly extreme British version of a gated community – do you think that's a real possibility?

There is a sense of impotence these days, an instinct to build little fences around ourselves. Because my English people are inherently polite people, they very rarely contradict each other and are happy to go along with things until, usually, it's far too late. I don't think we'll ever become an extreme fascist state in this country overnight, but we might over the years just drift into it and people will then ask how on earth did we get here? The English are not for turning!

But gently nudging? The English are for nudging.

One of the ideas of the play is our perception of real versus imagined threats. Do you think that is particularly pertinent to society today?

I think so, because we are increasingly distancing ourselves from reality. We get our information from newspapers or TV or the internet we are aware of things that are happening but since we don't witness them first hand relying instead on news media, often amplified, this compounds the sense that society is breaking down. I think there's too much information which we can't process fast enough – no wonder we're in danger of getting badly confused.

I've been aware that once I'm out of the stream – and when one is a writer, you do tend to keep dipping out and in – the world seems completely demented. Then when you get back to reality, you realise most of your fears were ludicrously exaggerated. Yes, it is risky to walk down certain streets even in Scarborough alone at night but society is not breaking down.

How would you compare Neighbourhood Watch to your last play, Life of Riley, which you brought to Cambridge last year?

I describe some of my plays as watercolours and some as oils. I think Life of Riley was probably more a watercolour and this is more towards oil – maybe a pastel! It's slightly bolder and has some extremely dark shadows in it, but also some light moments.

Life of Riley was rather oblique. A lot of people didn't quite perceive what was happening and were looking for twists which weren't there. This one is much more in your face.

On the cinema front, My Week With Marilyn (15) takes place in the summer of 1956 when set assistant Colin Clark is given the honour of escorting Monroe while she stays in London to make The Prince and The Showgirl which also starred Laurence Olivier. This bubbly British comedy is showing today at 7.45pm and Monday at 1.30pm. Finally, 50/50 (15) is showing on Wednesday February 8 at 7.45pm. A 'cancer comedy' might sound like a contradiction in terms, but when it comes straight from the heart, the result can be pure gold, as in this story of how true friendship overcomes the greatest of obstacles. Adam is a 20-something writer diagnosed with a tumour who seeks help from his best friend after his girlfriend leaves him high and dry.

ON STAGE: Nick Mulvey and, right, Ana Silvera are appearing at The Junction tonight.

Junction for talent

THREE musical talents come to The Junction in Cambridge tonight to share their latest material.

Nick Mulvey, founding member of Portico Quartet, recently picked up a Mercury Music Prize nomination (he was pipped at the post by Elbow) and is currently touring the country.

He began his career playing piano and drums but found his true calling on buying his first guitar aged 18. Aged 19 he moved to Havana to study Ethnomusicology, where he stumbled across his Portico Quartet bandmates.

The four young men then hustled their way around London, playing the South Bank and at various shows, selling 10,000 copies of their homemade demos over three years. With appearances across Europe and at Glastonbury, Festival and The Secret Garden Party last summer, plus a host of high profile London dates and a UK tour early this year to coincide with a release, it's clear that he's set for great things.

He'll be joined by indie classical singer Ana Silvera, whose EP The Aviary is out this month. Last year saw Ana sell-out a string of dates at The Roundhouse Theatre in Camden featuring a choir and performing her new songcycle, Oracles. Her songs are inspired by her own eventful life, as well as referencing mythical and historical tales for her lively narratives.

Also on the bill is singer-songwriter Gil Karpas, who What's On has already picked out as 'fast gaining a reputation for his soul-infused electro acoustic pop', and who has supported many major artists at home and abroad. Having racked up an impressive list of gigs, Gil is now releasing his EP and will be touring the UK next month.

■ Nick Mulvey, Ana Silvera and Gil Karpas, The Junction, Cambridge, tonight. Doors are at 7pm. Tickets from (01223) 511511 / www.junction.co.uk

Fairytale brought to life in a great show

REVIEW:
Mother Goose
Haverhill Arts Centre

ANOTHER traditional fairytale was brought to life by the Centre Stage theatre company on Saturday at the Haverhill Arts Centre with their adaptation of the Mother Goose tale.

There were laughs all round as the story unfolded from the goose farm, to the underwater world of the pool of eternal youth and back to dry land for the finale.

Credit should be given to the young actors who delivered their lines without fault and with confidence and to the two youngest members whose dancing was as good as their peers.

Special mention should also be made to the young lad who played the Demon King, who is a rising star.

Plenty of audience participation and jokes kept everyone entertained and the quality of the backdrops made the story seem all the more realistic. Another great performance in the bag for Centre Stage.

The big film

CARNAGE certificate 15, 79m

DIRECTOR Roman Polanski strips away the veneer of civility that separates man from beast and reduces two well-to-do couples to snarling adversaries in this film version of the award-winning stage comedy. Playwright Yasmina Reza adapts her own work for the big screen, entrusting her incendiary dialogue to a cast including former Oscar winners Jodie Foster, Kate Winslet and Christopher Waltz.

It's an acting tour-de-force, the tension heightened by the claustrophobic setting of a swish Brooklyn apartment where an act of aggression between two children provides the dramatic spark for the hostility. Alan Cowan (Waltz) and his wife Nancy (Winslet) visit the apartment of Michael and Penelope Longstreet (John C Reilly and Jodie Foster) to apologise for their son Zachary, who has hit the Longstreets' son Ethan in the face with a stick. As a result, poor Ethan has two broken teeth, nerve damage and swelling to his upper lip. The meeting is intended to be brief and courteous and Alan tries to speed along proceedings by candidly and brusquely admitting his son is a maniac.

But as the conversation ebbs and flows, tensions become evident until poor Nancy is taken ill and spoils Penelope's prized Kokoschka art catalogue. The Cowans head for the bathroom to clean up while the Longstreets seethe. Once the guests return to the sitting room, verbal exchanges become increasingly terse and heated until all sense of decorum disintegrates and the couples lash out just like their boys. Carnage lives up to its title, decimating the characters' facades of politeness and charm as collective tempers fray. Polanski works closely with cinematographer Pawel Edelman to move the argument around the enclosed space, shooting from different angles to draw imaginary battlelines between the couples as they vie for supremacy. Waltz is thoroughly obnoxious as the corporate lawyer who is constantly rude to his hosts by taking urgent calls on his mobile phone, while Winslet degenerates from simpering peacemaker into cackling harpy. Foster and Reilly are equally strong, turning on each other about the sensitive issue of their nine-year-old daughter's pet hamster.

Fruit crops face a shortfall

THIS year's mild winter may lead to reduced fruit crops this autumn with a subsequent rise in prices, according to the Royal Horticultural Society (RHS).

Most hardy fruit plants need a period of chilling during winter to encourage flowering. Without this cold effect, evidence shows that crops, including blackcurrants, cherries and some apple types which have a particularly high chilling requirement, may be reduced.

The other potential problem is that if there is not a prolonged cold period, plants will start growing earlier than normal and may flower early too, putting them at a greater risk of damage if there is frost in April and early May.

Early flowering could mean less fruit being set as there may be fewer pollinating insects around. The current cold spell may help but RHS fruit experts suggest that a colder and longer spell of weeks is needed to ensure that growth and flowering development is held back.

"We have already seen buds on the trees beginning to swell," says Jim Arbury, RHS fruit and trials specialist.

"I have noticed that two of our autumn-fruiting raspberries were flowering. This shouldn't be a problem as the canes will be cut to ground level in February. More worrying is that our blackberry cultivar 'Silvan' is also flowering and is therefore likely to have a reduced crop."

There's only a limited amount gardeners can do to reduce the damage.

Arbury advises: "If gardeners have only one or two fruit bushes that have started filling their buds, these can be covered with some horticultural fleece or an old curtain if it looks like there is going to be frost overnight."

by Hannah Stephenson

However, what you may lose in apples, you may gain in figs, says Guy Barter, RHS chief horticultural adviser.

"Figs don't need cold over winter to flower. The fig flowers inside the fruit and a milder winter like this is perfect for them, leading to earlier crops and bigger harvests."

However, the tips of branches that carry fruit are vulnerable to frost and a potential crop can be ruined during cold weather.

Protect figs in winter by covering the bare branches with a few layers of horticultural fleece or by packing the fan-trained branches with straw. Remove the fleece or packing by the end of May.

Greenhouse fruits such as nectarines and peaches should flower earlier, although they will still be in their dormant state until March, when flowers begin to form.

If you're new to greenhouse gardening, invest in a thermometer and avoid overheating the glasshouse, but also make sure you take the greatest care to avoid the flowers becoming frosted if there's a late cold spell.

On warm summer afternoons, open up the greenhouse to let pollinating insects do their work.

If the warm winter followed by late frost hinders your apple harvest, try other types for more success.

Barter advises: "Amateur growers can buy late-flowering cultivars, including 'Court Pendu Plat', an ancient French dessert variety which flowers at the beginning of May, or the cooking varieties 'Crawley Beauty', the latest flowering apple, or 'Edward VII'.

NATURE'S WAY: Apples and blackberries, above, may suffer because of the mild winter.

YOUR GUIDE TO MOVING HOME

1 Moving home can be a complicated business and, in the hectic run to the big day, it is all too easy to forget something vital. The Property News offers their readers this handy checklist that should help avoid major pitfalls. We suggest you tick off the items as you deal with them...

WITH FOUR WEEKS TO GO:

- ☐ Get estimates from removal companies, checking that comprehensive insurance cover is available against damage or loss. Is there a packing and unpacking service? Confirm the date of your move with the firm you have chosen.
- ☐ Check on your home contents insurance policies to ensure that you are covered for the move, and covered at your new address.
- ☐ Make arrangements for your gas and electricity meters (plus water meters where relevant) to be read and all your appliances to be disconnected on the day of your move.
- ☐ Arrange to take over gas and electricity at your new address, and make sure that all appliances will be properly fitted, plumbed or connected.
- ☐ Notify British Telecom and ask them to make the necessary arrangements for a final account at your present address, and for taking over or installing telephone facilities at your new home.
- ☐ Arrange for change of address cards to be printed.

WITH TWO WEEKS TO GO:

- ☐ Confirm all arrangements, times etc, for meter readings, disconnections and reconnections, with authorities and with your buyer and seller.
- ☐ Make sure you have a good stock of packing materials, including sturdy boxes and plenty of string and sticky tape.
- ☐ Begin to throw out unwanted items from attics, wardrobes. What you really don't want you may as well dump now, or send to charity. It's a great time for a good sort out!

WITH ONE WEEK TO GO:

- ☐ Send off change of address cards.
- ☐ Arrange and pay for automatic redirection of your mail by the Post Office.
- ☐ Cancel and pay up accounts for routine delivery services such as milk, groceries, fuel and your Cambridge Evening News. Re-organise these deliveries for your new address.
- ☐ Defrost refrigerators in preparation for move and, if you are moving a freezer and its contents, turn it up to maximum for a couple of days before you move.

WITH ONE DAY TO GO:

- ☐ Complete your packing except for those items you are likely to need overnight, and prepare a picnic for moving day.

Learners have to raise their game for latest test update

THE driving theory test will pose more of a challenge from today because of changes designed to prevent candidates learning answers by heart.

The change will mean that learner drivers will not be able to study and memorise answers from pre-published official study material.

These changes come as the AA publishes a survey which reveals that one in four drivers do not know who has priority when traffic lights are not working.

The AA/Populus poll of 11,361 drivers showed that 23 per cent thought traffic going straight on had priority at broken traffic lights, while 3 per cent said it was those turning right and 2 per cent those turning left.

The correct answer is that nobody has priority.

The AA fears that, with a quarter of motorists not knowing the correct procedure, it could result in accidents and road rage.

Almost half (46 per cent) of drivers did not know what a flashing amber light at a pelican crossing meant, the poll also showed.

Drivers aged 18-24 were the most likely to know the answer, with 68 per cent answering correctly. But only 41 per cent of drivers over 65 knew the answer.

Mark Peacock, head of AA Driving School said: "Knowing the theoretical rules of the road is really important for drivers.

"It's encouraging that young drivers did better in the poll questions than older – perhaps a sign that those who have recently taken a theory test have a better understanding of driving theory than those who took it a few years ago.

"Learners should not unduly worry about the changes to the test. The new test calls for greater understanding, which can be gained from professional tuition and some time spent revising; both of which would have been needed to pass the theory test confidently before the changes."

The Driving Standards Agency said that the changes will mean that learner drivers and riders gain a better understanding of driving theory, because they can no longer rely on simply learning which options are correct for individual questions.

Road Safety Minister Mike Penning said: "By bringing a stop to publication of theory test questions we aim to encourage candidates to prepare by learning each topic area thoroughly rather than just memorising the questions and answers.

"The intention is to improve candidates' knowledge and understanding of driving theory, so that they are more able to retain and apply it when they are on the road."

The theory test books and software still offer revision questions for candidates to test themselves and assess their progress, and have exercises so learners can practice applying their knowledge on each topic to case studies.

There are also new sections of revision support for motorcyclists and a free e-book for car drivers.

The agency has also launched its first iPhone apps for theory test revision, which help candidates to study and monitor their progress at their convenience as they approach their test date.

Five-door Up! soon available to order

VOLKSWAGEN'S Up! city car has been revealed in five-door form, but is not yet available to order.

Only three-door models can be ordered at present, with the first models arriving in showrooms throughout March.

Apart from shorter front doors and the addition of rear ones, everything about the Up! stays the same. The rear bench seat is set 72mm higher than the front seats, so passengers can have a clearer view of the road.

That does, however, reduce rear headroom by 46mm. The rear passengers escape the full 7cm deficit, presumably because the roof lining is thinner at the back.

The five-door Up!'s list of safety equipment and options are the same, so it can be specified with City Emergency Braking, which brakes the Up! in the event of a predicted collision with the back of a stationary car.

The Up! has already received top honours at the prestigious What Car? awards, where it was named Car of the Year for 2012, and has also been named Top Gear magazine's Small Car of the Year.

Prices are yet to be confirmed for the five-door model, but three-door prices start from £7,999 on the road, so it seems reasonable to expect the new version to start at around £8,400.

Haverhill's pair are counted out

ONLY countback separated Haverhill pair Andy Fish and Pat McGarr from a place among the leading positions in the Winter Alliance meeting at Waldringfield.

Joined by Roger Toone and Ian Carter, from the Stoke-By-Mayland club, they were one of two teams to finish on 83 points behind team stableford winners John Foord, Tom Martin, Chris Veitch and Dick Seaman (Felixstowe Ferry) who had 86 and Stowmarket's David Walker, Keith Rooney, Mike Toon and Roger Taylor on 85.

However, the combined team were edged out of the top three by Lawrence Cottrell and Josh Cottrell (Ipswich), Steve Wade (Felixstowe) and Dean Garnham (Rushmere).

■ Jackie Condon finished seven points clear of her nearest rival when she won the ladies' section's January Stableford and, as a result, has had her handicap reduced to 16.

Details - 1 Jackie Condon 37pts, 2 Doreen Darbey 30, 3 Sue Carr 28.

■ Wayne Smith had his handicap reduced by one shot to 14 he came out on top in a tight finish to the January IFF Challenge.

Scoring was close across the divisions and Smith needed countback to take the honours. Details - Division One: 1 Matthew Farlie 79-12-67, 2 Ellis Brown 78-10-68, 3 Dave Pipe 75-7-68 (lowest gross). Division Two: 1 Wayne Smith 82-15-67 on count back from 2 Ivan Drury 84-17-67, 3 Stewart Johnstone 89-19-70.

Division Three: 1 Keith Whittell 97-24-73, 2 Graham Hepworth 97-23-74, 3 Paul Mower 102-27-75.

■ Kevin Eldred was too hot for the opposition when he won the men's medal competition after a delayed start because of the freezing conditions.

He fired an excellent nett 65, and, as a result, he has reduced his handicap to seven.

Late tries kill off seconds' hopes

Haverhill II 15 Thurston II 32

Suffolk Merit League, Division Two

WITH the first team inactive, Haverhill resisted the chance to make wholesale changes and stuck with what was largely their usual side.

And that decision was underlined by the league leaders, whose better communication and familiarity with each other - honed by being able to regularly field the same side - battled to victory.

Haverhill's only change was enforced, the first team's veteran fly-half Mark Jury replacing the unavailable Andy Carr and Carl Anderson, and from the start he marshalled those around him to put pressure on the Thursford line.

Therefore it was a surprise when the visitors took the lead from a breakaway try, and the scoreline was increased when they added another in the confusion after a line-out. However, Darren Carew - fresh from a hat-trick the previous week - pulled a try back and Haverhill went in level at the break after Jury converted a penalty.

Parity did not last long. Haverhill conceded a try after the restart and their position was not helped when Andy Chatton receiving a yellow card for retaliation right in front of the referee. They kept plugging away though and Kieron McDonagh pulled a try back only for Thurston to score a controversial pushover try - which ended Carew's involvement because of a shoulder injury - and they added two late touch downs.

That's not such a good start: Eaton Socon's No 7 James Godfrey fires his side into an early lead in the Kershaw League, Premier Division clash against West Wrating, who only arrived at the ground 10 minutes before kick off because of traffic problems. However, Owen Longley scored the first goal of his hat-trick to equalise as Wrating recovered to win 4-3. Debut-making Jermaine Olney also scored and Wrating's joint manager Brian Pilgrim said: "I'm quite pleased because they've had some good results lately."

Betts baffled by ref

Wroxham 2 Haverhill Rov 1
Ridgeons League challenge Cup, quarter-final

PETER Betts was mystified by a number of refereeing decisions as Haverhill were knocked out of the Challenge Cup at Wroxham.

The manager was staggered to see Jamie Challis get injured by a bad challenge and for the aggressor to go unpunished.

Dan Cornwell put Rovers ahead from the penalty spot, and Betts felt the player who committed the foul on him should have been dismissed, rather than booked.

Things got worse when Cornwell was on the receiving end of another strong tackle which left him needing a trip to hospital for stitches.

Wroxham made it all square with 12 minutes remaining and went ahead in the final minute from the spot following another decision which baffled Betts, Paul Abbott adjudged to have felled an opponent.

Haverhill could have bagged a dramatic leveller in added time, but Jack Wilkinson had the game's third penalty saved.

"There were some indifferent refereeing decisions, shall we say," said Betts. "I was disappointed to get knocked out, but I wasn't disappointed with the lads' workrate."

Ridgeons Reserve League, South Division
ROVERS' reserves lacked any cutting edge as they slumped to a disappointing defeat against a physically-stronger Clacton side.

Although the hosts had the territorial advantage in the first half they were unable to turn any of their possession into goals.

returning Marc Abbot, and Adam Palmer all had chances, but Rovers keeper Michael Bavester had to make a sharp save from David Coyle, who nevertheless broke the deadlock five minutes before the break with a shot from the edge of the area.

Bradley Gazl took advantage of a rash pass across the penalty area to extend the visitors' lead on 53 minutes and he made it 3-0 from a free kick five minutes later.

Rovers pulled a goal back with eight minutes left when Aaron Forshaw's fine cross was finished, at the second attempt, by substitute Luke Youngs.
